CPR and United Steelworkers reach new agreement

Canadian Pacific Railway (CPR) and the United Steelworkers (USW) representing 1,500 clerical workers and employees at intermodal facilities across Canada have reached a tentative three-year labour agreement.

The agreement, subject to ratification, will take effect January 1, 2007 and extend until the end of 2009. The tentative settlement includes improvements to wages and benefits as well as a number of work rule changes that will enhance work/life balance while, at the same time, help to improve productivity and manage costs.

Details of the agreement will be released once ratified.

About Canadian Pacific Railway

Canadian Pacific Railway is a transcontinental carrier operating in Canada and the U.S. Its 14,000-mile rail network serves the principal centres of Canada, from Montreal to Vancouver, and the U.S. Northeast and Midwest regions. CPR feeds directly into America's heartland from the East and West coasts. Alliances with other carriers extend its market reach throughout the U.S. and into Mexico. Canadian Pacific Railway is marking its 125th anniversary in 2006. For more information, visit CPR's website at www.cpr.ca.

About the United Steelworkers Union

In Canada, the United Steelworkers represents more than 255,000 men and women who work in all economic sectors. For more information, visit the USW website at: www.local1976uswa.ca.
