NEWS RELEASE

March 4, 2003

IMA CONFIRMS BONANZA GRADE SILVER VALUES AT NAVIDAD PROJECT

IMA Exploration Inc. announces that it has received check-assay results from ALS Chemex and Alex Stewart laboratories confirming the high silver values announced on February 3rd, 2003 at its new Navidad high-grade silver discovery. Navidad is located in the Patagonia region of Argentina and is 100% owned by the Company.

Check assays have been performed by Alex Stewart on approximately 20% of all samples collected to date. These samples confirm the previously reported exceptionally high-grade silver and copper values (see Appendix Table 1). Lead assays by Alex Stewart and subsequent re-assays by ALS Chemex show that the samples with lead grades in excess of approximately 6% were originally given erroneously low values (see Appendix Table 2). Alex Stewart (assayers) Argentina S.A. is part of an international organization serving the mineral industry in environmental, exploration, and production analytical work and has extensive experience in umpire assays and mineral concentrate analysis.

Edgar Filing: IMA EXPLORATION INC - Form 6-K

A program of preliminary mapping, rock sampling and grid soil sampling has now been completed by the Company's Exploration Manager, Keith Patterson, M.Sc., over the known mineralization at Navidad. 108 new rock samples and 297 soil samples were collected, and results are expected shortly. The encouraging results at this early stage of exploration at Navidad indicate the potential for a significant expansion of previously reported bonanza grade and replacement style mineralization. IMA's Qualified Person for the Navidad project is Dr. Paul Lhotka, P.Geo.

IMA will be attending the PDAC conference in Toronto from March 9th to the 12th at the Investor's Exchange, booth #2421. Shareholders and all interested parties are invited to visit with the Company's Management at the booth to learn more about IMA's exploration activities.

Lead % re-analysis are significantly higher in lead than reported in the press release of February 3, 2003. A slight tendency exists for Alex Stewart to report higher grades in silver and copper than ALS Chemex.

Complete list of new lead values for all samples which original assays were greater than 6%. Testing by Alex Stewart laboratory has confirmed the redone analyses are valid. Lead assays by Alex Stewart and subsequent re-assays by ALS Chemex show that the samples with lead grades in excess of approximately 6% were originally given erroneously low values. This was caused by precipitation of lead-salts prior to analysis by atomic absorption therefore reducing the content of lead in solution and resulting in the lower values of lead reported. ALS Chemex has since modified and standardized its procedures for samples from the Navidad project to accommodate the unusually high-grade nature of some of the samples. All samples with original lead values of greater than 6% have been re-analyzed by ALS Chemex.
