Item 1.01 Entry into a Material Definitive Agreement

On June 28, 2006 Biolase Technology Inc. ( Biolase or the Company ) entered into a binding letter agreement with The Procter & Gamble Company ( P&G ) evidencing the formation of a strategic relationship between the two companies. The binding letter agreement sets forth the terms and conditions under which the parties will negotiate a definitive agreement formalizing P&G's acquisition of certain exclusive rights from Biolase in exchange for certain cash payments by P&G. The letter also sets forth the agreed-upon key terms and conditions that will be incorporated into the definitive agreement.

Upon execution of the binding letter agreement, P&G paid $3.0 million to Biolase for the rights and licenses that will be memorialized in the definitive agreement. At the same time, Biolase granted to P&G a provisional, exclusive, worldwide right and license to all Biolase intellectual property and technology related to, and for use in, the development of consumer products in a number of different areas. In the event of a breach or termination of the binding letter agreement, Biolase will have to return to P&G the $3.0 million payment and the provisional license granted by Biolase to P&G will terminate.

In addition to the $3.0 million payment, P&G will make quarterly payments to Biolase in the amount of $250,000 beginning three months after the execution of the definitive agreement and continuing until the large-scale commercial launch of the first product under the agreement. Seventy-five percent (75%) of each $250,000 payment will be treated as pre-paid royalties and will be credited against royalty payments owed by P&G to Biolase. The agreement also provides for product launch and option payments ranging from $1.0 million to $4.0 million in the aggregate, depending on the number and category of products actually launched. A portion of certain of these payments will be treated as pre-paid royalties and will be credited against royalty payments owed by P&G to Biolase. Following product launches, P&G will be obligated to make royalty payments to the Company based on a percentage of net product sales.

Biolase and P&G have agreed to negotiate and execute a definitive agreement incorporating the terms set forth in the binding letter agreement and its exhibits. Pursuant to the binding letter agreement, the definitive agreement will terminate on the date the last Biolase patent licensed to P&G expires. Additionally, P&G may terminate the definitive agreement if there is an uncured material breach of any provision of the definitive agreement. Upon any termination for an uncured material breach, P&G may require Biolase to refund certain payments made to Biolase under the agreement. Alternatively, following an uncured material breach, P&G may elect not to terminate the agreement and instead to retain its exclusive license without any further payment obligations to Biolase. In that circumstance, P&G will not be entitled to receive reimbursement of any previous payments.
