Strategic Importance of PLM to Oracle

PLM is one of the fastest growing enterprise application segments

License

spend estimated to reach $7.3

billion in 2009;
11%+
CAGR
growth.

By 2009, PLM is projected to be third largest segment in applications*

Product innovation is a business imperative to drive growth and differentiation

PLM is evolving into an Enterprise, cross-functional discipline across all lines of business

Effective product innovation requires management and coordination of product information, processes and decisions, across all lines of business and across the extended design and supply chain

This requires PLM to span multiple design systems and to have integrations with many enterprise applications.

The trend also means that PLM is often part of an overall enterprise decision

Oracle is in a strong position to grow Enterprise PLM

Oracle is a technology leader with best-in-class capabilities in ERP, SCM, CRM, HCM, BI, and MDM/PIM applications, as well as industry-specific applications

PLM is a natural fit and a strong complement to Oracle's current technology and enterprise application solutions, supporting Oracle's strategy of providing the industry's most comprehensive and compelling Enterprise Applications

Joint Customer Example

Global deployment of Oracle 11i E-Business Suite including Advance Planning and Supply Chain products, Siebel CRM and PeopleSoft HCM Oracle
Solution:

Ensured regulatory compliance with secure product data and enhanced history tracking

Reduced cycle time from days to minutes for data iterations with contract manufacturers

Saved money and time by eliminating suspect data, failures, and errors with one true source for all product information

Provided global, 24/7 accessibility to product information
Business
Results:

Deployed Agile PLM to over 6,500 external and internal users in all 6 business units worldwide Agile
Solution:

Slow product development due to scattered product information across global manufacturing sites

High costs of data integration failures & errors

Lack of user-specific secure, regulated, global access to data
