LEADING PROXY ADVISORY FIRMS ISSUE REPORTS IN STRONG SUPPORT OF ILLUMINA

ISS Concludes Roche's Offer is Inadequate

ISS, Egan-Jones Both Recommend Stockholders Re-Elect All of Illumina's Director Nominees

Illumina Urges Stockholders to Vote the WHITE Proxy Card Today

SAN DIEGO April 6, 2012 Illumina, Inc. (NASDAQ:ILMN), a leading developer, manufacturer and marketer of life science tools and integrated systems for the analysis of genetic variation and function, today announced that Institutional Shareholder Services Inc. (ISS) considers the Roche offer to acquire Illumina inadequate and has recommended that its clients support the re-election of Illumina's slate of directors and vote against all Roche proposals at Illumina's 2012 Annual Meeting of Stockholders to be held on April 18, 2012. Another leading proxy advisor, Egan-Jones Ratings Company (Egan-Jones), also recommended that its clients support the re-election of the incumbent directors and reject Roche's proposals. ISS and Egan-Jones are leading providers of independent proxy voting advice to institutional investors and other fiduciaries throughout the world.

We are pleased that ISS, especially, recognizes that Roche's unsolicited offer, even as increased to $51 per share, clearly undervalues Illumina, and that our highly qualified and experienced independent Board is best positioned to protect our value creation potential on behalf of our stockholders, said Jay T. Flatley, President and CEO of Illumina. Our Board will continue to work closely with management to drive growth, deliver compelling results, and create significant stockholder value. We look forward to the support of Illumina's stockholders at the Annual Meeting, and are confident they will reject Roche's efforts to seize control of Illumina's Board and prevent a hostile takeover of their company at a grossly inadequate price.

In its April 6, 2012 M&A Edge report, ISS stated*:

the current bid of $51.00 does not provide meaningful compensation for the potentially enormous long-term opportunity shareholders would forego by selling at this point [and] falls short of providing a compelling enough consideration to cause Illumina shareholders to support Roche's nominees.

With the lack of serious competition in the near future, and the vast potential for sequencing that is already starting to appear, the board should rightfully be concerned about unnecessary truncation of value by selling the company at too low a valuation of its future.

Traditional financial metrics that focus on near-term or past profitability exactly the metrics on which Roche has focused are not particularly useful because they do not measure the one thing both current shareholders and Roche are most interested in: the commercial potential of the company's disruptive technology, across a number of large addressable markets.

The board's decision to pull the annual meeting ahead by approximately three weeks rather than, as sometimes happens, to delay the shareholder vote suggests both an openness to shareholders' interests, and confidence in the integrity of the board's own position on the value being offered.

Illumina urges its stockholders to vote their WHITE proxy card to re-elect four highly qualified, experienced and well-informed directors – A. Blaine Bowman; Karin Eastham; Jay T. Flatley, President and CEO; and William H. Rastetter, Chairman – to Illumina's Board. Illumina's director nominees are accomplished executives and experts in their fields, and once re-elected will continue to act in the best interests of all stockholders. If stockholders have questions about how to vote their shares on the WHITE proxy card, or need additional assistance, they should contact the firm assisting Illumina in the solicitation of proxies:
