Subject: ISS Recommendations Regarding Amalgamation

Dear AXIS Colleagues,

This morning we received word that Institutional Shareholder Services (ISS) published its individual merger recommendation reports for AXIS Capital and PartnerRe shareholders. ISS 's findings were split: AXIS Capital shareholders received a for recommendation indicating that ISS supports our Board 's strategic rationale for pursuing the amalgamation agreement with PartnerRe, while PartnerRe shareholders were given an against recommendation.

Here is what I can tell you:

I am not surprised by the ISS recommendation in favor of our agreement to amalgamate with PartnerRe. It affirms the many benefits and opportunities that the combination of our two companies would bring.

In our view, however, the separate ISS analysis for PartnerRe shareholders is inconsistent with the reasoning put forward in the AXIS Capital report. Of course, these recommendations will form only part of the overall information shareholders from both companies will consider when they vote. The ISS point of view is neither a determination nor guarantee that shareholders will vote in one way or another. We will continue to engage directly with shareholders as they conduct their own analysis.

We were in a great position before being approached by PartnerRe with the proposed merger a position of strength with a sound strategy in place to achieve our business goals and reach our desired levels of profitability. This proposed merger accelerated the timeline upon which we set the achievement of our goals, and remains worth pursuing. However, if it does not happen, then we will continue to pursue our business strategy with energy and commitment, wiser for what we have learned, and more confident in our own strengths, having seen the great work and continued diligence that you have demonstrated during this period. We have a strong platform, superior market positioning , a great team and an exciting future, and I expect these truths will persist regardless of the outcome of the vote.

Please find attached our press release regarding the ISS recommendations as well as an FAQ. As usual, please send any additional questions you might have to XXXX@axiscapital.com and they will be answered as quickly and thoroughly as possible.

Frequently Asked Questions Regarding ISS

Earlier today, Institutional Shareholder Services (ISS), one of four proxy advisory firms, made a recommendation regarding our proposed amalgamation with PartnerRe. They released research reports supporting their opinion that the merger is in the best interest of AXIS shareholders (a FOR recommendation), but not in the immediate best interest of PartnerRe shareholders (a recommendation AGAINST).

Please see the FAQs below, which we hope will answer additional questions you may have about this development. Please send further questions to XXXX@axiscapital.com.

What is ISS?

ISS is a proxy advisory firm. A proxy advisory firm is a firm hired by shareholders of public companies (in most cases an institutional investor of some type rather than an individual investor) to recommend positions regarding proxy statement votes on their behalf.

What happened today?

ISS gave a recommendation FOR the amalgamation to AXIS shareholders. Conversely, it gave a recommendation AGAINST to PartnerRe shareholders.

Will the other proxy advisory firms release recommendations?

Yes.

What does their involvement mean? Is this unique to our deal?

Proxy advisory recommendations are a standard part of the preparation process for shareholder votes of this scale.

Does a FOR recommendation mean the amalgamation will be approved? Conversely, does an AGAINST recommendation mean that it will not?

No. These recommendations do not necessarily determine the outcome of a vote. Historically, there are examples of shareholders supporting Boards of Directors even with an ISS recommendation AGAINST . The ISS recommendation is just that: a recommendation. Most shareholders will conduct their own analysis using all the information available, of which the ISS recommendation is only one part.

What do these recommendations from ISS mean for the amalgamation?

We will continue to pursue the amalgamation as we have been, continue to engage directly with shareholders and await determinations of both sets of shareholders in August.
