Sasol hosting visit to Qatar GTL plant

Over the 50 years of Sasol's operations, the company has developed a competitive advantage in synthetic fuels technology, which it has applied to convert coal, and now also natural gas, into liquid fuels in South Africa. One of Sasol's key growth drivers is to grow a global business, based on the use of this technology, known as gas-to-liquids (GTL), to convert natural gas into low-emission diesel. The first project, Oryx GTL, where Sasol has a 49% stake, is currently under construction in Qatar. Sasol is today hosting a visit for analysts and investors to the Oryx GTL plant. As part of this visit, a set of presentations covering the history, technology, financing, implementation, operations and marketing aspects of this project will be discussed with the attending investors and analysts. These presentations have been posted at http://www.sasol.com/sasol_internet/frontend/navigation.jsp?navid=8200002&rootid=3
