When Sasol announced its results in September 2005 for the financial year ended 30 June 2005, we commented: “International oil and commodity chemical markets and prices are unstable and so forecasting these with confidence is not possible. Nevertheless, assuming no major disruptions in world currency and energy markets, we anticipate satisfactory growth in earnings in the year ahead.”

During the intervening months, international oil prices have been nearly 25% higher than anticipated, the Rand : US Dollar exchange rate has been weaker than expected and pleasing plant efficiencies and operating rates have generally been achieved. As a result, Sasol’s financial results for the six months ending 31 December 2005 are forecast to be better than anticipated when the previous public announcement was made.

Although it is premature to comment on attributable earnings for the six months ending 31 December 2005, headline earnings are expected to be between 65% and 75% higher than those of the comparable previous reporting period (ie six months ended 31 December 2004).

It is important to note, however, that based on an expectation that international oil prices will be lower in the second half of the financial year and that commodity chemical prices and margins will also weaken, earnings growth for the full financial year is expected to be more in line with the profit outlook given in September 2005.

Forward looking statements

We may in this document make statements that are not historical facts and relate to analyses and other information based on forecasts of future results and estimates of amounts not yet determinable. These are forward-looking statements as defined in the U.S. Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995. Words such as "believe", "anticipate", "expect", "intend", "seek", "will", "plan", "could", "may", "endeavour" and "project" and similar expressions are intended to identify such forward-looking statements, but are not the exclusive means of identifying such statements. By their very nature, forward-looking statements involve inherent risks and uncertainties, both general and specific, and there are risks that predictions, forecasts, projections and other forward-looking statements will not be achieved. If one or more of these risks materialize, or should underlying assumptions prove incorrect, actual results may be very different from those anticipated.

The factors that could cause our actual results to differ materially from the plans, objectives, expectations, estimates and intentions expressed in such forward-looking statements are discussed more fully in our annual report under the Securities Exchange Act of 1934 on Form 20-F filed on October 26, 2005 and in other filings with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission. Forward-looking statements apply only as of the date on which they are made, and we do not undertake any obligation to update or revise any of them, whether as a result of new information, future events or otherwise.
