Do not be misled by the communications you may receive from EXOR. The facts are very straightforward:

Stronger company. The merger will immediately enhance our strategic positioning and financial strength and build upon our proven track record of stability and success.

Rating agency support. All four major independent credit rating agencies have publicly stated that the merger with oAXIS Capital will result in a firm with greater scale and diversified business profile that will have an enhanced market presence.

Same strong credit profile. After detailed discussions with the rating agencies we are highly confident that the oratings of the merged PartnerRe/AXIS Capital would remain at the same current strong levels upon the closing of the merger and into the future.

Retain voting rights. You will retain all your valuable voting rights and have a focused, market leader underpinning oyour investment.

The Italian Investment Company EXOR is Attempting to Acquire PartnerRe for Below an Appropriate Price
Their Offer Would Introduce Great Risk to Your Investment

We believe there is great risk to you if the Italian investment company named EXOR acquires PartnerRe and it is important that you exercise your vote as a preferred stockholder to ensure that an EXOR takeover attempt is not successful:

Subject to the business considerations and pressures of a portfolio of industrial companies. PartnerRe, under potential EXOR ownership, would be part of a portfolio of companies that are capital intensive and marginally profitable with limited free cash generation (including Fiat Chrysler Automobiles).

“Negative Outlook” on EXOR’s ratings. EXOR’s debt ratios will increase substantially in the context of an acquisition of PartnerRe, a factor cited by S&P in assigning a “negative outlook” to EXOR’s rating.

Increased “parent” debt. This debt burden would be supported by EXOR’s operating subsidiaries, including PartnerRe, could limit EXOR’s financial flexibility and might introduce uncertainties and risk to PartnerRe preferred shareholders.
